PLEASE REVIEW

Website changes for your confirmation

This combines your Loom recording, revised written copy and later voice notes. Your latest direction is to simplify the structure while keeping the current visual feel. Please check that I have understood the changes before I update the site.

01 Overall direction

- Make it immediately clear what you offer, particularly to someone arriving for the first time on a phone. Keep the expressive language, but introduce the services in plain language first.
- Simplify the interface and the paths between pages. Keep useful white space so visitors are not met with too much text or too many choices at once. You like the current colours and overall visual feel; the example sites you sent are references for simplicity and navigation, not a request to copy their design.
- Please find and send two or three font options you personally like, ideally with links and a note on which you would use for headings and body text. Many of the strongest distinctive web fonts are paid and require a web-use licence, so it makes sense for you to shortlist the ones you would be happy to use. I will check licensing and suitability before implementation.
- Once the fonts are chosen, use a consistent hierarchy and readable sizes across desktop and mobile, including the top navigation. Break long copy into clearly spaced paragraphs.
- Explore whether your own handwriting can be used for the word textured. If that is not practical, show a suitable contrasting font treatment.

02 Home page

- Use the Landing Page copy you have now supplied, beginning 'Hello, I'm Aneesa, founder of a textured word.' It explains the offer through teaching, writing/repurposing and performance. Spread it through the page where that improves readability, as you suggested, and flag any proposed cuts to you.
- Keep the service routes clearly labelled Teach, Repurpose and Voice, in line with your recording. Your newly supplied paragraph uses 'performing words'; preserve that wording in the body copy unless you ask to change it.
- Keep 'Words aren't flat. They're textured.' Consider moving it below the opening explanation, or to another suitable part of the site, so the offer is clear first.
- Keep the first screen concise, using the revised Landing Page text across the page rather than placing it all at the top. Retain the open space you liked.
- Avoid repeating a full About or Content section on the home page when those topics have their own pages. A short qualifications area near the image is a possible alternative placement, subject to your approval.

Please confirm: Is the direct service statement the right first message, with the current poetic headline retained further down or elsewhere?

PAGE CONTENT

About and teaching

03 About

- Keep the Aneesa heading. Use the About copy you have supplied, including your teaching, writing and performance background, in readable paragraphs. Set one of the alternate portraits you previously sent alongside it, if the layout works.
- Keep About as one clear page. Your later voice note withdraws the request for a separate subsection about why you chose the name. The existing purple explanation box covers that story; avoid repeating it in another destination.
- In the qualifications area, adjust 'CertTESOL' to read with a space between 'Cert' and 'TESOL', without repeating 'Trinity'. Under British Council, replace 'Former teacher in Egypt' with the exact caption supplied in your notes: Teacher Training Programme.

Please confirm: Which alternate portrait should be used on the simplified About page?

04 Teach

- Make the teaching routes easy to reach: Key Stage 3, I/GCSE, I/A-Level, ESL/general English and IELTS. Your follow-up notes give those two exact combined labels, so there is no need to spell out 'International' each time. Compare your earlier dropdown idea with a simpler Teach overview in the two structure concepts.
- Use the short teaching-category descriptions from your latest materials. Teaching is currently the main service, so make its routes and offer especially easy to understand.
- Remove every '/hour' price. Present your teaching offer as packages, since you are not taking on hourly clients.
- Include the IELTS teacher training and enhanced DBS information only with its correct current status and wording. In the recording, the training was in progress and the DBS application had been made; neither was described as completed.

Please confirm: I will use I/GCSE, I/A-Level and 'Teacher Training Programme' as written in your new notes. If the IELTS training or enhanced DBS appears on the site, should its current status be shown as pending/in progress?

SERVICE PAGES

Repurpose, voice and content

05 Repurpose

- Keep a portfolio only where real examples can be shown. Remove empty sample or testimonial placeholders. Testimonials can be added once you have them.
- The recording does not establish a number of Repurpose examples. Use only real pieces from the material already supplied; leave the portfolio hidden if there is no approved work to show yet.

06 Voice

- Use Voice consistently as the navigation and service label, replacing 'Narrate' where it is used for that route. This matches your line 'I teach, repurpose and voice words'.
- Use the Voice: Further details paragraph now supplied, including Stylish Voice, Gary Terzza and the types of voice work you have done. The Television Workshop story is already in your revised About copy, so avoid repeating it here.
- Populate the Voice/narration portfolio with the roughly six real samples you said you had sent. If any files cannot be located, I will identify the missing ones rather than leaving placeholder samples visible.
- In the enquiry form, remove the separate 'Audiobook narration' choice and retain the existing 'Voice work' choice. Keep the other options you said were fine, including the distinction between types of teaching enquiry.

07 Content

- Make Content one landing page instead of a set of dropdown pages. Retain the introduction and its explanation of why this strand of work exists.
- Move the passage you highlighted to the start of that introduction, using the latest copy you have supplied. Put Substack, YouTube, social links and collaborations on the same page.
- Use the social links and other materials you have already supplied. Keep room for future collaborations without showing empty placeholder sections.

Please confirm: Have I understood the portfolio distinction correctly: approximately six examples for Voice, and Repurpose examples only where you have material ready to show?

FINAL CHECK

Navigation and your approval

08 Sitewide navigation and handover

- Keep the purple 'textured word' panel and the way the word stands out. Use it for the name explanation and its connection to all three services; agree any shortening or final placement with you, without adding a separate name subsection.
- Replace the repeated three-service block near the bottom of pages with a simpler, clearly separate set of onward links. It should be obvious that these are navigation choices, not part of the page text.
- Check each route as a first-time visitor on both phone and desktop. Someone looking for IELTS should be able to find the teaching information without having to work through Voice or other unrelated material.
- Prepare two stripped-back structure concepts for you to compare. Keep the current colours and overall feel; show how each version makes the three services distinct, preserves useful detail and removes unnecessary steps. Use the Pavone, Smith Galer, Miss Guided Films and Andy Hayward sites as navigation references, not visual templates.
- As I edit, flag sections that seem unnecessary or confusing rather than adding every possible detail. Keep the material that genuinely helps a visitor decide what to do next.
- At handover, provide access and a short walkthrough so you can edit copy, links, qualifications, portfolios and future testimonials yourself.

Font selection

You have already sent the revised copy and follow-up notes, so I will work from those. Please send two or three font options you like, with links if possible. Many distinctive web fonts require a paid licence; please indicate if you are happy to consider a paid option. I will check whether each choice is suitable and properly licensed for web use. If you still want your own handwriting for 'textured', a clear sample would help.

Is this correct?

Please reply to this message with either 'Yes, this reflects what I meant' or your corrections, referring to the section numbers above. Please include the font options you prefer, or let me know when you will send them. I will use your reply to agree the scope before making the changes.
